

There is one God.... The rest are details.

God is the source of everything and the patterns thereof. The way I see it, God as an omnipotent singularity can do anything except relate. To escape this singular state and be able to relate to someone, God splits functionally into the trinity; Matter, Spirit and the mediator between the two Mind. These three; matter (material light), mind (intellectual insight), and spirit luminosity, further divide and/or associate along their seven possible combinations. Each displaying certain specific attributes. These dissociations/associations/cooperations/patterns continue until reaching their current states e.g. humans. At each stage, the cooperation of the sub parts, has the properties of their undivided source (e.g. the three persons of the trinity acting collectively are God).

We exist because of the cooperation of our matter, mind and spirit. At this stage we are mostly material matter, with a little mind and a tiny bit of spirit (soul). To the extent that we learn to cooperate, we add value (truth beauty and goodness) to our spirit/soul component. Our soul grows and allows us to continue the search for our source even after our matter rearranges itself into something/someone else.
